New Horizons

The New Horizon of 1986 was the challenge of hard work students and faculty members had to face at Howe this year. Everyone had to adapt to changes caused by teacher surplus and reduction in force as many students' favorite teachers were no longer around. Despite these problems, Howe still proved to be one of the nation's top urban schools and was well represented by its athletes on the playing field and by students rushing to math contests or SAT's on Saturday morning.

Senior computer whiz Jim Cooper is one of many students who take advantage of Howe's computer facilities.

Student Life

In spite of the problems facing Howe in many areas, 1986 marked a revival of school spirit and successful activities. The traditional spring musical, senior play and Pops Concert were only a few of the many activities at Howe in 1986. Activities such as the slave sale added laughter to a school day and the lip sync made Howe stand up and cheer.

Members of the marching band enjoy the football game and each other's company before their half-time performance.

Musicians have good year

Activity in Howe's traditionally strong music department continued at full strength in spite of I.P.S. staff and budget cutbacks. Performing groups put on all the traditional public shows and did very well in competition against groups from other schools.

On the instrumental scene, the year's biggest news was the return of band/orchestra director David Poncar, who had initially been given his release as part of the system-wide reduction in force. Poncar's return gave the instrumental groups some much-needed continuity as they have had a number of different directors within a short time span.

Although both band and orchestra were small in size, the marching band continued to draw members in spite of restrictions caused by bussing and lack of private musical training on the part of most of its members. Few city students own their own instruments, and most of them depend upon the school music instructor for all of their training.

The orchestra lagged behind in recruiting as fewer students each year have previous training on orchestra instruments.

The marching band continued to receive special attention, including the support of an active band parents group. This year the band traveled to Charleston, Indiana, for the Southern Indiana Festival and also went to the Jennings County Invitational, where it placed third in band competition. Highlights of the year included marching in the 500 Festival Parade and receiving new uniforms in school colors to replace the unpopular blue and white uniforms.

Because of numbers the orchestra restricted its performances to the traditional ones. Highlights included the Pops Concert and the spring musical.

The vocal groups, directed by Tom Lewis and Bob Bramblett, had successful years in spite of their youth and inexperience. Both the concert choir and the Varsity Singers did well in competition. The concert choir produced a state-finalist effort for the Indiana School State Music Association, and the Varsity Singers made an outstanding effort at the Show Choir Contest. Several Howe vocalists also had an opportunity to sing in the All-City Concert Choir with the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra at the Circle Theater on February 28.

Because of scheduling problems, the Madrigal Singers restricted their dinner performances to two nights on the Howe stage. Seniors Steve Rubick and Regina Garza were cast as Lord and Lady of the Manor.

The music department continues to do a superior job of showcasing student talents in spite of the many problems facing the schools.

Young actors enter outer space

For many years the highlight of the music department's year has been the annual spring musical. Three years ago, department chairman Tom Lewis convinced school officials that his young performers could benefit from a summer performance which would provide dramatic training at a more relaxed pace than during the school year. Although not a financial success, the performances have generally been good and the young singers have profited from their experiences.

The 1985 summer production was an outer space melodrama entitled Pardon Me, Is This Planet Taken. Loosely based on Star Trek, the story had everything from romance and adventure to broad comedy. Particularly effective were the roles of Regina Garza as a female version of Mr. Spock and Jon Martin as a lovesick robot in very human form. Also playing key roles were Guy Booher, Jill Frederickson, Bill Yates, Dennis Trinkle, Kathy Miley, and Amy Gable.

Although lack of air conditioning kept audiences small, the play was well received by those in attendance.

'Guys and Dolls' hit on Howe stage

Damon Runyan's Broadway characters came to life on the Howe stage on March 21 and 22 as the music department presented Guys and Dolls, another in a long line of successful spring musicals. Small but enthusiastic audiences sat enthralled both evenings as director Tom Lewis's inexperienced cast showed the results of weeks of intensive rehearsals. There were flashes of brilliance as Nathan Detroit Guy Booher, Miss Adelaide Regina Garza, Sky Masterson Steve Rubick, and Miss Sarah Brown Evelyn Winslow took shape on stage.

Successful performances were even more rewarding because numerous problems had plagued the cast through the weeks of planning and rehearsal. First, as always, was the limited talent pool available for amateur actors. A school of 1,600 doesn't have as many talented people as it did when it contained a thousand more students. Besides the lack of stage experience as this year's choir was younger than usual. In addition, there was the continuing problem of poor attendance at rehearsal. Cast members simply don't seem as dedicated as they were before the days of widespread student jobs. Besides jobs, many cast members were also deeply involved in other school activities and had to split their time between activities.

Nearly everyone in the cast seemed ideally suited to his role as director Lewis did his usual masterful job of casting young talents. Despite attendance problems everyone seemed made for his role by performance night. Few will forget the off-and-on romance of Guy Booher and Regina Garza as Nathan Detroit and Miss Adelaide, who have been engaged for fourteen years. Nor could they forget the performances of Steve Rubick as the seemingly self-assured gambler Sky Masterson and Evelyn Winslow as the inhibited Salvation Army worker Miss Sarah Brown.

As always, the cast seemed to overcome its problems on production nights. Both cast and audience were given unforgettable experiences.

President evaluates Council year

When asked what I like and dislike about Student Council, I realized that I never really thought about it that much before. It's not an easy question to answer. I guess the reason I enjoy being in Council is because it gives me the opportunity to do what I like best — showing people I care and making others happy. Working on projects and seeing the actual success of all of your planning and hard work is an incredible feeling — truly a unique experience. For me, Student Council is my existence here at Howe. Even during the times when I get burned out and am ready to give up, there's that feeling inside that won't let me, the feeling that for better or worse, Student Council is a really important part of my life, a part of me.

What do I dislike about Student Council? My dissatisfaction with Council stems from the isolation I feel. Sometimes I think I'm the only one who cares. It's really hard to want to do new things when you think that you're the only one who is willing to put forth the effort to see it through. The same people do everything. It's kind of upsetting to stare at an entire group of people who supposedly want to represent the student body and realize that very few of them want to take the initiative and accept responsibility. After all, if we're elected to serve your school, and we don't, who will?

Yearbook woes continue

The 1986 Hilltopper staff started out to make a unique yearbook that would surpass the quality of previous yearbooks. Unfortunately, they were unsuccessful. Problems causing delay in delivery of the yearbook included laziness in writing copy, failure to show up for work sessions, and irresponsibility of various kinds. All of these factors led to missed deadlines and the lateness of the book.

Tower conquers problems

The 1985-1986 Tower Staff inherited a long tradition of prize-winning papers which dared to break journalistic tradition by covering issues generally untouched by the high school press. Although controversial topics have often raised objections, papers have rarely been dull. The tradition continued unbroken until staff turnover at mid-year interrupted production for a short time.

After regrouping under new leadership, the paper took up where the staff had left off. Year-end issues managed to reach the previous level of quality in spite of obstacles. Topics such as school closings, teacher morale, and "no-pass, no-play" athletic eligibility aroused discussion throughout the school.

ROTC is . . .

. . . to me, a very fun class. Some people say that all you do in ROTC is tests and push-ups but that isn't true. It's an easy class and an easy credit but I'm not doing it just for the credit. I'm doing it because I enjoy it and I like the military knowledge I'm getting. I think ROTC is a fun and also educational class. I would recommend it to anyone that is interested. Like they say on TV, "It's a great place to start." Jeff Houpt

. . . a very good program. It's very good discipline for a person. It also teaches you a lot about the future. It helps if you decide to go into the military. I would recommend it. Mike Nicoson

. . . a very cool class to be in. You can learn some meaningful things in this class. You don't have to be anyone but yourself. You are never bored in this class. I like this a lot. Rickey Parker

. . . fun and fresh. James McReynolds

. . . a training class of leadership. LaToya Ealy

. . . a class which teaches students how to better their leadership abilities and helps them become more responsible for the things which are left in their hands. ROTC also is a class which teaches students to work as a team and not just as an individual. Vionnta Rivers

. . . challenging, educational, and fun. It is beneficial to you whether you go to the military or not. James Combs

. . . a great thing to be in. It teaches you responsibility and leadership. It gives you an edge for the military. It develops skill and coordination. You enter to learn and go forth to lead. I'm proud to be an ROTC cadet. Ron Tingler

. . . a nice class because it is not a hard class, and the teachers are nice, and the tests are not hard, and you take tests only on Thursday, and you only have to wear your uniform on Thursday, and the inspections are not really that hard. Tyrone Carr

. . . a fun class to be in. You learn leadership and responsibility, and you learn how to accomplish many things any other kid couldn't do. You have different sports in ROTC. ROTC has sports most kids can't be in because of not being in ROTC. Billy Jenson

. . . a class that instills a sense of responsibility into the cadets. The class also creates leadership in some people and brings out leadership traits in those who already have it. The class helps people to go into society and apply their leadership in their job, etc. The class also lets a person know that other people count — not just that person. David Gard

. . . more than learning about the army. It teaches you about leadership and respecting others. Debra Fisher

. . . a very fun and interesting class. It helps people out a lot and will prepare them for their future. It disciplines, educates, and enlightens its students. Ron Grayson

. . . a place you can go and you'll always be welcome. ROTC people are people you can count on. ROTC teachers are the best. ROTC is a subject where you can grow as a person and as a cadet. Kelli Williams

. . . a fun class. People say that ROTC is a hard class and is dull, but it's really not. It's just like any other class. People make fun of the uniforms, but it doesn't bother me. What would our society be like without people in the corps and the service. You can have fun in the class, but you have to make the best of it. Mike Bates

. . . a class that teaches students how to be a better citizen and how to build a strong nation. Joe Fultz

. . . interesting and helpful in different kinds of ways, physical and mental. Paul Horton

. . . fun and a great experience. Shuanita Rowland

. . . a great way to learn military knowledge. You learn respect and how to get along with other people. ROTC builds pride and self-esteem. Anne Rhodus

. . . a class that helps cadets to meet all of their standards. Nancy Johnson

. . . a nice class to have if you need discipline . . . the instructors are very nice. Chelsea Hudson

Clubs survive loss of sponsors

Reduction in staff and transfer of teachers to other schools probably hit club activities more than any other part of the school program this year. Gone in particular were Booster Club sponsor Jackie Greenwood, Art Club sponsor James Komann and Computer Club sponsor Jeff Cain, who had maintained active clubs. Naturalists Club sponsor James Yarber also spent the first semester on leave and was not present to keep his group going in the same form.

Some clubs survived loss of sponsors; others did not. The Computer Club remained active with math teacher Larry Brown as sponsor. The Naturalists Club remained in the form of the new Science Club. Booster and Art Clubs fell by the wayside from lack of interest and loss of sponsors.

Surviving organizations had varying degrees of success throughout the year. Foreign language groups remained active on an informal basis. Math groups were still strong. The quiz team had one of its better seasons in recent years, beating nearby Warren Central. Most active of all and perhaps the most successful was the Media Club, which met regularly with several members.

Turmoil plagues school system

Turmoil plagued the 1985-86 school year as continued financial problems caused overcrowding and restricted course offerings throughout the Indianapolis Public Schools. After much public debate about possible solutions, the Board of School Commissioners voted to reassign students throughout the city in order to save money and make better use of facilities. In their most drastic action, both Crispus Attucks and John Marshall High Schools would become junior highs for 1986-1987 and their students would be assigned to other schools. As might be expected, many feelings were hurt and wounds were left which will take years to heal.

Although Howe was never mentioned as one of the schools which might be closed, it had its share of problems as students and a far-smaller faculty struggled all year to make the best of a difficult situation. With 19 fewer teachers than needed to start the school year, crowded rooms and large classes were the norm. Academic classes of 40 students or more were not unusual, and remedial classes often reached the thirties. Individual attention suffered as overworked teachers had little time to spare and found themselves exhausted at the end of a day.

Poor attendance continued to be a major problem as students frustrated by larger classes found class cutting a great temptation. In an attempt to solve the problem by establishing better communication with the home, principal Frank Tout purchased "Herbie," a sophisticated computerized calling system which would notify parents about attendance problems. Cutters soon found themselves in the awkward position of having to explain suspicious absences at home. In some cases attendance improved dramatically.

As with any new system, however, there were problems which had to be resolved before Herbie could be considered a success. Errors were common at first as flaws were discovered and teachers got used to a new routine. Absence lists remained long and cutting continued in spite of everyone's efforts. Poor attendance remained a major cause of failing grades.

In spite of these problems, there were reasons for optimism as new ideas and new methods brought life to many classrooms. The physical education department, in particular, went through many changes as long-time department chairman Jim Stutz became supervisor of athletics and physical education for IPS. He was replaced as chairman by James Perkins, who brought ambitious plans for using community resources in the physical education program. When Perkins received an opportunity to leave Howe at mid-year to become administrator for the world indoor track and field championships to be held in the Hoosier Dome in 1987, he was replaced as department chairman by Jim Arvin. Arvin in turn brought additional new ideas, especially in relation to drug education.

The year ended with everyone hoping that IPS problems could be solved and next year be easier.

Sports

espite the lack of funds in Howe's athletic program the Hornets still produce competitive teams and many individuals receive state recognition. Howe fans always see a great show wherever the Hornets play.

Howe provides a full program of girls' sports to go along with its traditionally good boys' program. Karen Kelly, shown on the second green at Pleasant Run, is one of many female athletes at Howe.

'Good old days' gone from city sports

The good old days of high school sports are gone from city schools. Full stands and frequent championships are little more than memories of the past. Poor attendance, deteriorating facilities, and struggling programs are now the rule rather than the exception as principals, coaches, and athletic directors seek new ways to provide opportunities for every student who wants to participate.

Howe students are more fortunate than many as the school still maintains every IH-SAA-recognized sport plus soccer. Dedicated coaches still work long hours at low pay trying to produce winning teams with schedules which work against them by scheduling many contests against larger, much richer suburban schools with fine facilities and larger coaching staffs. Many times the obstacles are so great that Howe teams are defeated even before they take the court or playing field. Titles are few and far between and win-loss records are often poor in spite of the best efforts of players and coaches.

Page after page of print has been written about the causes. Bussing has destroyed old loyalties, and many students are turned off by school. The school is no longer the neighborhood community center, and people in the community don't identify with it as they once did. Jobs take up time which might be given to playing sports or attending athletic events. There is competition from the pros. There are many other forms of entertainment competing for attention. The list could go on and on.

One thing hasn't changed: Even in I.P.S., people still support a winner. Broad Ripple basketball teams played to packed houses while they were ranked number one in Indiana this past season. Many of those attending Broad Ripple games were Howe students looking for the best game in town.

The problems of athletics are real and pressing, but there are no easy solutions. Fortunately for those who realize the value of sports, the Indianapolis Public Schools have so far managed to avoid such extreme solutions as cancelling athletic programs entirely. What the future holds, is uncertain.

The 1985 spring sports season was typical of the situation as small numbers tried out for most teams. It was more a season for individual accomplishments than one for team titles as only girls' track and boys' golf brought home a championship trophy of any sort.

On a positive note, the girls' track program, in what most would consider a rebuilding year, finished 7-4, brought home another city championship trophy, and qualified six girls for the state finals. Several team members stood out individually.

Senior Alberta Campbell closed out an outstanding career by taking city meet firsts in both the 800 and the 1600 and qualifying for the state meet in the 800. She also ran on the 1600-meter relay team which took a city title and placed sixth in the state meet. Her titles in track and cross country ranked her as the top female distance runner at the high-school level in city history.

Also in track, junior Kim Jointer was a mainstay in both relays and showed her versatility by becoming one of the city's best quarter-milers after switching from the sprints to the quarter. She was voted MVP by her teammates. Junior Elva Keaton was city champion in the long jump and ran on both winning relay teams. Freshman Chelsea Hudson was also a triple city champ with first in the 100 and 200 and a leg on the 400-meter relay. She showed promise as one of the state's top sprinters until a leg injury ended her season early. Sophomore discus-thrower Daphne Byrd and junior hurdler Jennifer Guthrie joined Campbell, Keaton, Jointer, and Hudson as state meet qualifiers.

The boys' golf team, in trouble in recent years, salvaged a respectable 7-5 record by defeating all of the I.P.S. schools on its schedule and taking first place in the IPS Invitational. Senior Charles Uhls, the team's MVP, was medalist in the IPS tournament. Unfortunately, they lost to all the outside schools they played. The team was coached by physical education department chairman Jim Stutz.

Another program which continues to draw large numbers and achieve respectable records is the girls' tennis team. Coach Ron Finkbiner's squad, led by senior MVP Lisa LaRue, fought their way to a 10-8 record despite a schedule which hasn't been softened. Although the young team lacked a championship player, it was solid at all positions and showed potential for future years.

Boys' track, once a state powerhouse, struggled through a winless 0-9 season as many athletes from previous years failed to show up for new coach Martin Sam's spring call-out. One of the few bright spots was a group of 15 freshmen with above-average talent. A few upperclassmen also stood out individually. Sophomore distance runner Sean Marcum and junior shot putter Damond Jones qualified for state meet competition. Marcum was a surprise city and regional champion at 800 meters. He was individual high scorer in the city meet with his first in the 800 and seconds in the 1600 and 3200. Sophomore Billy Harper showed promise of developing into one of the city's top sprinters.

In one of the season's most disappointing moments, coach Errol Spears' baseballers were forced to combine their freshman and reserve squads and cancel their freshman schedule entirely as few freshmen turned out for the "national pastime." The Hornets were competitive at the varsity level but struggled for wins. Junior Chris Johnson led the pitchers and senior Dennis Law, who made the city all-star team, led the hitters. Seniors Bruce Jacob and David Abella and sophomore Darrin Litteral were also solid hitters. Law was voted MVP by his teammates.

Girls' softball improved but continued to struggle against some of the state's top teams, including eventual champion Warren Central. As might be expected from such a schedule, the record was a modest 8-8. One bright spot was the hitting of junior Angie Sheets, who led the squad with a respectable .378 batting average and 22 runs batted in. Junior transfer student Lori Hupp, the team's top pitcher, earned all eight victories.

Injured in action

Everyone who has ever been an athlete remembers those nagging little pains that wouldn't go away. He remembers playing with pain because he didn't want to let his teammates down or because something inside him wouldn't let him quit. He knows that nearly every sport carries the risk of a career-ending, perhaps permanent injury. Injuries can end careers and turn good seasons into poor ones, but most athletes forget injury and compete anyway.

These pages are dedicated to the spirit of competition which draws people to sports in spite of, or because of danger.

Flashes of brilliance, moments of defeat

The fall season was a mixture of dramatic successes and just as dramatic failures. In football, the most visible sport, the Hornets showed flashes of brilliance alongside moments of defeat. As a team, however, the Hornets never quite found themselves and lost five of their first six games including some they were expected to win. Entering sectional play against Manual, the Hornets were 3-5 with wins over Broad Ripple, Marshall, and Tech. A 10-6 victory over the Redskins gave the Hornets a chance to play eventual state champion Warren Central. The outmanned Howe squad was overwhelmed by the Warriors, 45-0.

Despite the 4-6 record, there were several team and individual achievements worth noting. The squad ranked third on the Howe all-time list for passing yardage and fourth for pass completions. The defense made 16 interceptions to rank fourth. Among individual stand-outs were junior quarterback Derek Hawthorne and senior wide receiver Clyde Spencer, who were both voted first-team all-city players. Sophomores Edwin Scott and Kenny Smith led several newcomers who contributed.

If the varsity record was disappointing, the freshman record was just as rewarding. Coached by former Howe stars Mark Piercy and Bruce Shadiow, the freshmen went 7-1 to tie for the best freshman record in the city. A vicious defense allowed only 3.0 points per game while a versatile offense averaged 17 points per game. Quarterback Mario Scott, the leading passer, and halfback Alonzo Johnson, the leading rusher and scorer, were offensive stand-outs. Russ Harpold was a consistent threat as the team's top kicker.

In soccer, a 1-12-1 record was no indicator of the Hornet Sting's ability or effort. Coach Dave Stewart's young program is one of the school's biggest draws as 27 players tried out and few dropped off the squad. Playing a demanding schedule against schools with a much-longer history of soccer competition, the team was competitive in nearly every match and represented the school well.

Coach Errol Spears' boys' tennis team found itself facing a demanding schedule with little experience and no superstar. Brian Hawkins played his way to the number one singles position. Number two player Randy Pritt had the team's best individual record with 10 wins and 6 losses in dual competition. He was one of the top seeds in the city tournament and was named MVP at season's end.

Coach Spears was especially pleased with the development of Jon Mertz, Mark St. Martin, and Steve Ward into solid tennis players by season's end.

The tennis squad's final record was 6-10.

Facing a schedule of mostly parochial and county teams because few IPS schools have girls' golf teams, an inexperienced Howe team finished with a 2-10 record. The two victories came against Broad Ripple and Speedway.

In volleyball, new coach Julie Bell Gilliland found her squad with little experience and limited athletic ability. Much of the season was spent working on fundamentals as the team struggled to a 3-16 season record. Steady improvement showed on the floor but not in the record. By season's end both varsity and reserve squads were playing well.

Girls' swimming coach Steve Dunlap closed out a successful tenure as Howe coach by coaching a small but talented squad to a second-place finish in the city meet. Several senior athletes closed out their careers with strong finishes. Diver Michelle Hayes, the team's most improved athlete, was city champion and qualified for the state meet with a third place in the sectional. Michelle Williams, the team's MVP, set a city record in the 100 backstroke. Kristy Dunlap set a dual-meet diving point record. Seniors Jill Stewart and Emily Winslow also contributed strong efforts. The team record was 6-8.

The cross country teams had only moderate success. Coach James Perkins' girls failed to live up to their potential and finished 6-6. Junior Lecia Keaton was the top runner. Otis Curry's boys' squad finished winless as they had trouble finding enough runners to fill out the squad. Top runner Sean Marcum was injured much of the season and could not compete in the early meets. With Marcum out, the burden of leadership fell on sophomore Scott Wright.

Fans cheer louder in winter sports season

Winter sports brought Howe fans a bit more to cheer for as Hornet teams had winning records in wrestling and both boys' and girls' basketball. In addition, the boys' basketball squad brought home a sectional title.

With no true center and no regular over 6'3", a basketball team is lucky to finish .500 in Marion County. After a series of lackluster pre-season practices and a serious leg injury to regular Mark St. Martin, even insiders were predicting rough times for Jake Thompson's varsity squad. Nearly everyone was shocked when the Hornets started their season with four straight wins including a convincing 70-64 victory over archrival Cathedral before falling to top-ranked Broad Ripple. The rest of the season was up and down as the Hornets lost a couple of games they were expected to win. Despite a season-ending injury to second-leading scorer Derek Hawthorne, the squad put things back together and won a sectional title. A 69-59 loss to Broad Ripple in the regional ended their season with a 17-8 record.

Three seniors and three juniors provided the spark for the Hornets as rotating regulars. Senior Clyde Spencer, playing center at a shade under 6'3", was the leading scorer and rebounder and received all-city honors. Seniors Jerome Gibbs and Darron Crowe provided outside scoring punch. Junior Derek Hawthorne was the second-leading scorer and top free throw shooter. Mark St. Martin was the fifth starter most of the season with James Smith providing spark off the bench.

Prospects for the future were uncertain as the reserve and freshman squads posted losing records.

If pre-season prospects seemed poor for the boys, they were even more so for the girls as coach Otis Curry faced the prospect of replacing graduated Natalie Ochs, the state's fifthleading scorer in 1984-1985 and the Hornets' single-season record-holder. With all five starters in only their second year of varsity basketball, the team shocked nearly everyone by finishing 16-5 in what should have been a rebuilding year. Three of those losses came against city champion and eventual state finalist Roncalli, a club with both experience and overpowering size.

The keys to the Hornet success were desire, strong rebounding, and an aggressive defense. Struggling offensively from inexperience, the girls parlayed blinding speed and good jumping ability into a defense which amazed scouts and kept opponents standing flat-footed behind the Hornet fast break.

With two of the city's top sprinters, 5'10" Chelsea Hudson and 5'11" Elva Keaton, handling rebounding chores, the Hornets owned the boards in almost every game as each averaged nearly ten rebounds per game.

Sophomore guard Tasha Price topped Hornet players with an all-city performance. Junior Kim Pritt shocked nearly everyone but coach Otis Curry with deadeye shooting. Sophomore Dana Ochs rounded out the lineup and provided additional scoring spark from the point position.

Gymnastics coach James Price entered his second season with better prospects than the previous year. Outstanding sophomore Dana Kees and senior Michelle Hayes were joined by sophomores Kim Maher and Tammy Douglas, two experienced gymnasts who hadn't competed for Howe as freshmen. They were joined by several other hard-working underclassmen. After a season in which they had had trouble covering events, the Hornets suddenly had depth in most events. Unfortunately, the competition included some of the best gymnastics schools in central Indiana and one of Howe's best teams in recent years found itself with a winless record (0-3).

The boys' swim team greeted its second new coach in two years as Charles Page took over. With a squad of 12 dwindling to six by season's end, the Hornets still had trouble keeping athletes through a full season of inconvenient practices at Tech. Those who lasted the full season managed to improve last year's winless mark to a 1-7 record and fourth place of nine teams in the city meet. The 200 medley relay team placed third in city competition.

When everyone else has trouble competing in the big time, one Hornet program manages a winning record nearly every year. In fact, wrestling coach Jim Arvin has had only one losing season in his tenure as head coach. Arvin is widely recognized as one of the state's top coaches and spent the 1985-1986 school year as president of the Indiana High School Wrestling Coaches Association. His peers named him to the organization's Wrestling Hall of Fame in 1984 because of his many contributions to the sport.

The 1985-1986 wrestling season was tremendously successful as all three squads had winning records and placed high in their respective city tournaments. The varsity season was especially rewarding as some talented seniors were helped by several underclassmen. Senior Bill Holliday was city champion with a dramatic come-from-behind performance. Talented senior Ron Grayson was the latest in a long line of state finalists produced by Arvin.

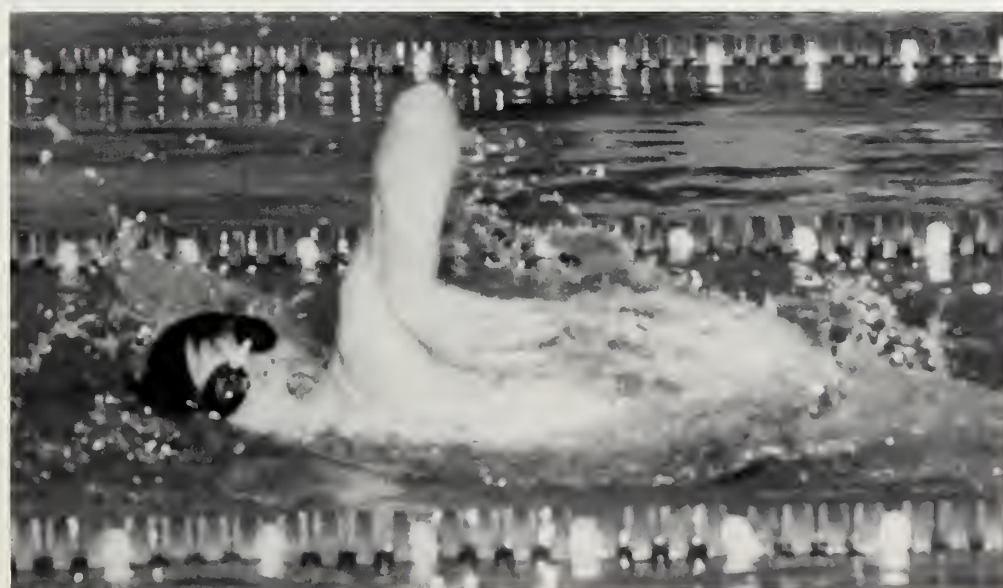

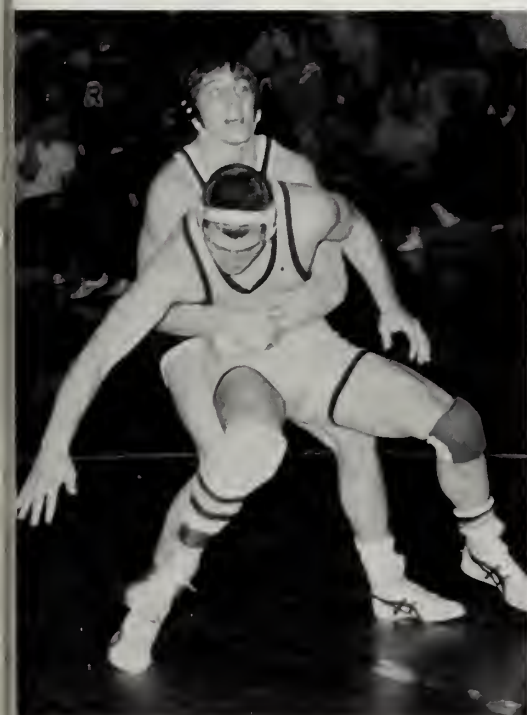

The winter sports season ended with optimism as most squads showed promise for good performances next year.

Spirit is . . .

" . . . cheering for the Hornets in the other team's stands. But that might be stupidity, I don't know." Brian Van Buskirk

" . . . to cheer the guys on win or lose. When someone says 'Howe's nothing,' I say, 'We'll see when we play you in football or basketball.'" Jon Rivers

" . . . Mrs. Simmons." Heather Hunter

" . . . rooting for Howe at every game." Kim Placek

" . . . taking pride in your school and your school activities." Senior Nick Tides

" . . . a thing of the past and of the future . . . many students don't realize that they as individuals are very important, but even more important are they when they combine and form a student body full of Howe pride, Howe enthusiasm, and Howe spirit!" Ericka Embry

" . . . supporting the cheerleaders." Ami Kincaid

" . . . very low. No criticism here, just facts. Howe has no spirit." Tina Barger

" . . . something that we all show at different times. Whether we're at a game or at home — anywhere! The problem is that some of us in the Howe family need to show spirit more often." Heather Byer

Homecoming full of spirit

Homecoming week was full of spirit thanks to all. Many students participated in spirit days and decorated spirit halls. Members of the student council and the cheerleaders made sure each spirit day was eventful. Bermuda day and stuffed animal day were the most favored throughout the halls. On these days students wore colorful flowered shorts and brought along their favorite furry friends.

Homecoming night opened with the seniors winning the float competition and the freshman class coming in second. Senior Coretta McNair was crowned homecoming queen with Tina Barger runner-up. Senior class president Tony Armstrong received the king's crown as David Vespo took second place.

Everything about homecoming was successful but the football game as the Hornets were defeated by North Central by a 31-0 score.

Seniors present humorous tale of after-life

After many weeks of after-school rehearsals, memorizing lines, gathering costumes and last-minute details, Lo and Behold, a story of life, and the after-life, was presented to a small but appreciative audience.

The story revolves around a very wealthy former Pulitzer Prize winner, Milo Alcott, played by junior Dennis Trinkle, and his unsuccessful attempt to live a peaceful after-life in his own home.

His home is invaded by three other ghosts looking for a place to live: Minnetonka Smalflower, a young Indian maiden, played by senior Elizabeth Sechrist, who fell to her death when she was pushed over a cliff; Kenneth Moore, better known as the Mad Musician of Mount Ivy, who refuses to leave because he has found a piano in Milo's home and can finally finish his compositions; and Miss Honey Wainwright, a sickly-sweet, bigoted Southern belle, played by senior Regina Garza, who was shot on her wedding day by her former boy friend because she didn't marry him.

To make matters worse, Milo's former maid, Daisy Durdle, played by sophomore Evelyn Winslow, who accidentally killed him, is mistaken for his long-lost daughter and given his entire estate. She meets Milo's doctor and long-time friend, Robert Dorsey, played by senior Steve Rubick, and falls in love with him.

When an old friend of Daisy's, Jack McDougal, played by sophomore Guy Booher, discovers she is not really the daughter of Milo, he threatens to tell Robert unless she gives him some of the money she is getting from Milo's inheritance. Daisy finally confesses and everything works out in the end.

There was a little controversy this year over the fact that while it is still called the Senior Play, two of the leading parts went to underclassmen. The director, Miss Shirley Smith, felt that they seemed to fit the parts best and the show went very well.

Senior Steve Rubick felt the results were well worth the effort: "It took a lot of hard work and dedication, but in the end, it was a gratifying experience."

Powderpuff game exciting again

Autumn is a time of falling leaves, brisk weather and, of course, football. Countless thousands of boys across America practice through the heat of summer and wet weather of early autumn just for the thrill of competition on a few Friday nights each year.

Where the boys are, the girls are bound to be also. At Howe and many other schools around the country, a few daring girls each year try to prove that they can play football just as entertainingly, if not as well, as their male counterparts. One night a year they meet on the gridiron, class against class and club against club, to prove that they too are football players. The results are entertaining, amusing, and often exciting.

This fall's annual powderpuff football game was entertaining as always and sprinkled with excitement as the freshman/senior team defeated the sophomore/junior group by a 13-0 score behind the running of senior track stars Jennifer Guthrie and Kim Jointer.
